

HOUSE LEADERS NOW BATTLING TO BREAK DEADLOCK

Faced With Bitter Sectional Fight That Threatens To Block Program

AN OPEN REVOLT

Wage-Hour Bloc Warns It Will Attempt to Sabotage Cotton Provisions

By Robert Humphreys
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1—(INS)—Faced with a bitter sectional fight that threatens to block the Administration's entire special session program, House leaders battled desperately today to break the deadlock on the wage-hour bill.

Open revolt was led by the House wage-hour bloc which bluntly warned it would attempt to sabotage cotton provisions in the pending farm bill unless assured that the labor legislation would be brought to a final vote.

In a virtually unprecedented move, speaker Bankhead, majority leader Rayburn and Democratic whip Boland waged a personal drive, button-holing members who had failed to sign the petition to free the wage-hour measure from the powerful Rules Committee—the House's own policy-making body.

As the new legislative day began, the petition bore the names of 194 members, still 24 short of the required 218 signatures to send the bill to the floor.

With the wage-hour bloc deliberately aiming its shafts at southern members who have balked at signing the petition, the seriousness of the situation was admitted by Chairman Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, of the Labor committee, following a conference with bloc leaders. She said:

"If by tonight there are not enough signatures to assure action on the bill, then there may be some trouble on the farm bill. This is a pretty determined bloc."

QUEEN ELIZABETH FORCED TO OVERCOME DIFFICULTIES

British Queen Has Tried Valiantly to Make Up for Lack of Training

IN HER ROYAL DUTIES

(Editor's Note: Queen Elizabeth is approaching the end of her first year as Queen Consort of King George VI. International News Service herewith presents the first of a series of five articles describing the public and private life of the Queen.—INS)

By Dick Halvorsen
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Dec. 1—(INS)—Queen Elizabeth of England today looked back on nearly a year as Queen Consort to King George VI—a year of trial and difficulty from which she has in the main emerged with distinction.

Just as King George VI has had to supplant the tremendously popular Edward in the hearts of his people, Elizabeth, a commoner with no queenly training, has had to try to fit herself into the queenly pattern formed by Queen Mary and Queen Victoria in the public imagination.

Queen Victoria had been a symbol of the British Empire, and Queen Mary has been a criterion of royalty, that the little Scottish commoner has had a great deal to overcome.

Elizabeth has been at a distinct disadvantage. Brought up on her parents' estate at Glamis, Scotland, where she was known as "Little Missie" to family friends, she had never a dream in her head of being queen and, even after she had married George, a thought of it, Edward, naturally, was heir to the throne.

Consequently she has had to try in the period of a brief year to orientate herself to a bewildering and unfamiliar task.

Physically no queen, Elizabeth is short and plumpish. She has good-looking legs, glossy blue-black hair which she wears parted in the center and with bangs, and deep blue eyes. Her complexion is pink and healthy and she wears only a slight touch of lipstick.

One of the surest tests of the popularity of the King and Queen is the reception accorded them as they pass the crowds in the royal coach on the way to the opening of Parliament.

Whenever King George and Queen Mary passed through the streets their faces were set in stern and regal mien. The same was true of King Edward VIII.

But this year as George and Elizabeth went through the crowds, George smiled and the Queen's face was lighted by a bright, tooth-displaying smile. In the long run, the popularity of Queen Elizabeth will depend on the success George has in winning over his people and the King is making definite headway.

BUCKS COUNTY POULTRY INDUSTRY REPORTED FAIRLY STABLE DURING PAST THREE YEARS

Sheep-Raising, Bee-Keeping, and Honey Production Also Good

FIGURES ARE GIVEN

Two Unidentified Young Girls Are Sent to County Jail By Morrisville Justice

In Bucks County the poultry industry has been fairly stable during the past three years, according to figures released by the State Department of Agriculture.

Sheep raising, bee keeping and honey production were also fairly stable, with value of products increasing slightly.

Following is the table released for Bucks County:

Chickens: January 1, 1935, from 903,500, valued at $794,080 to 1,007,560, valued at $967,260, January 1, 1937.
Eggs: January 1, 1935, 6,953,440, valued at $1,659,270, to 7,658,699, valued at $2,144,440, January 1, 1937.
Bees: January 1, 1935, 2660 hives, valued at $9310, to 2710 hives valued at $10,030, January 1, 1937.
Honey: January 1, 1935, 65,190 pounds, valued at $10,490, to 85,120 pounds valued at $16,170, January 1, 1937.

A complete surprise to the pastor, Rev. Charles F. Freeman, and many of the worshippers in Salem Evangelical and Reformed Church, Doylestown, was the appearance on Sunday morning for the first time of a junior choir of 25 voices, fully vested, and under the direction of Allen George.

For a number of weeks a committee has been secretly at work fashioning the vestments and Mr. George was just as busy during this time training the young voices for the special services celebrating the 40th anniversary of the building of the present church edifice.

Immediately after the senior choir had entered the church auditorium through the east transept the juniors appeared at the north door and marched through the center aisle of the church singing the processional hymn with the congregation and the senior choir, which was directed by Charles F. Schabinger, and with Mrs. Walter

URGES CAUTION WHILE BEHIND THE WHEEL

Trenton Police Official Speaks To Morrisville Parent-Teacher Association

CITES HIGH DEATH TOLL

MORRISVILLE, Dec. 1—Declaring that 37,800 deaths by motor cars in one year is proof that we do not know how to behave behind the wheel, Lieutenant John McBride, of the Trenton Police Department, spoke to members of the Morrisville Parent-Teacher Association at a safety meeting here.

"We must develop a mode of conduct, as drivers, which can be favorably compared with the thoughtful, courteous conduct in our social relations," the speaker said.

"The attitude of boys and girls of high school age toward 'Safety First' must be changed. They must be taught that while 'Safety First' is cowardly when heroic conduct is needed, it is necessary in trivial, commonplace acts of life.

"When they realize that 'Safety First' in the small things is not 'sissy,' but that foolhardiness is cowardly and causes unnecessary loss of life, we shall have a generation of better drivers," Lieutenant McBride concluded.

The health and safety posters made by pupils of the third, fourth and fifth grades were displayed and the prize winners announced as follows:

Third grade: First prize, Irene Leash; second, Helen Beth Krantz; first honorable mention, Lottie Krysa; second, Patricia Kohl. All these children are pupils of Miss Mary Schuyler.

Fourth grade: First prize, Charlotte Bleasdale; second, John Lebeberg. Both are pupils of Miss Helen Amerline. First honorable mention, Betty Jane Tomlinson, pupil of Miss Mildred Arms; second, Edward Byer, pupil of Mrs. Viola Murray.

Fifth grade: First prize, Charles Farkas, pupil of George Itterly; second prize, Marvin Widman; first honorable mention, Paris Allison; second honorable mention, Theodore Levandowski, pupils of Miss Myra Arms.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1937, by The Baltimore Sun)

Significant Words

IT has been seriously charged—and not by irresponsible people either—that whether Mr. Roosevelt realizes it or not, if the policies he has inaugurated become fully effective the result will be to change our form of government, and that there were men around him who, to use his own expression, deliberately "planned it that way."

THIS is a charge that has to be denied and is not easy to prove. The New Dealers scoff at the idea, dwell upon the Americanism of the President, assert the allegation comes from frightened "Tories," anxious to hold on to their "ill-gotten gains." Nevertheless the uncontroverted fact is that from the beginning of his first Administration he has had among his most influential advisers various men known to favor collectivism and heartily against the capitalist system. In his recent consideration of steps to "restore business confidence" two such men ironically

BY THE SENIOR CLASS

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Dec. 1—Members of the class of '38 of Bensalem Township high school are co-operating to make their play, "Life Begins at Sixteen," an enjoyable and profitable event.

The play is a glorious heart-warming comedy of youth; it captures the language, the spirit, the very soul of young America, as few plays have succeeded in doing.

The central characters are Paul and Frannie Hollis, 16-year-old twins. Paul is an imaginative, sensitive boy who has recently discovered the meaning of the word "ideals." Frannie is a direct, charming, wholesome girl, ready for life. As the play opens, Mrs. Hollis has just been rewarded with a trip to Havana for herself and her

PREFERS CROOKED BODY TO WARPED CHARACTER

Miss Wigley Would Rather Find Case of Bad Posture Than Bone Laziness

SPEAKS IN DOYLESTOWN

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 1—Three hundred men and women heard Miss Mary Sue Wigley, Dawson, Ala., deliver an address last evening, on the subject of "Making a Living and Living a Life."

A most outstanding woman speaker, Miss Wigley was procured for the occasion by the Village Improvement Association, being introduced to the audience by Mrs. J. Purdy Weiss, president.

In her human interest talk, Miss Wigley declared that "Income touches the whole of human existence, in spite of the fact that the home cannot be run like a business. The outstanding difference between running a home and a business is that business has the spur of competition. We are glad homes are not like that. We are glad men choose wives because they love them, and not because they are good business women."

Continuing, Miss Wigley said that "A business is run to make money, and its members must be efficient or lose their jobs. Women have the easier time insofar as they do the spending, but with all the intangibles involved in running a home, it is more difficult than running a business."

Describing farm tenancy in the cotton belt as a form of serfdom to which she and her parents, brothers and sisters, were reduced after her father lost his business, Miss Wigley gave as a shining example of a truism that "If you want success you must be willing and able to pay the price. It is foolish to cry for better opportunity when you have a body full of energy and a mind to think."

My experience with a budget is of the family kind. A budget will work gloriously if you are not in a hurry."

Because she knows the stark realization of life, Miss Wigley stated she could not glorify the poverty which caused her to give up hope. "I have strewn pounds of fertilizer until I was so stooped I was horrified when I looked at my posture in a full-length mirror." Asserting that not really wanting a job is worse than not having anything to do, Miss Wigley stated: "It is better to have a crooked body than to have a warped character. I would also rather find a case of bad posture than bone laziness."

Urging the women to set up a conscious standard of living, the speaker assailed standardized budgets. "There is no such thing as a standardized scientific budget which can be worked out uniformly. If you are in debt and want to be free, you will plan a lop-sided budget. Sickness cannot be budgeted, and often it is necessary to have a lop-sided budget to have protection."

Stressing Christian vision, Mr. White told of famous women in history, telling of the lives of Clara Barton, Florence Nightingale, Rebecca, Ruth and Naomi and others. The speaker told how women can influence men, and thus stressed their importance in the world for good.

Miss Margaret Rathke, chairman of the devotional committee, introduced the speaker. Hymn singing was included in the program.

ACQUIT VEIT OF DRUNKEN DRIVING; MUST PAY COSTS

Jury Returns Verdict Favorable To West Bristol Man

OTHER COURT CASES

Trenton Woman Given Suspended Sentence on Drunken Driving Charge

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 1—Arthur Veit, West Bristol, was acquitted yesterday in court here, on a charge of driving an automobile while drunk.

Veit, in defending himself, claimed before the court, that the case was a "political frame-up." He admitted having two glasses of beer in a tap-room, with a political opponent. In his testimony he stated that while he was drinking his "political opponent" left, Veit blaming said "opponent" for calling a member of the highway patrol who later arrested Veit as he made his way along a thoroughfare in Bristol township.

Veit was represented by John P. Betz, Jr., of Bristol.

Dr. J. Fred Wagner, Bristol physician, who examined Veit after his arrest, testified that Veit was under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

A number of men and women, residing near Veit's residence, were in court, the women showing their pleasure over the defendant's acquittal by greeting him with kisses as the decision was given.

Veit was directed to pay the costs of the case. Judge Hiram H. Keller was the presiding judge.

The arrest was made on November 7th by Corporal Evans of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, Oxford Valley barracks.

The physician who examined Veit testified in court that as the examination took place following Veit's arrest, the West Bristol man saluted him a dozen times.

Three residents of Bristol section were members of the jury, the jury being composed of: Margaret Porter, Bristol R. D. 2; E. Wilmer Slack, Newtown R. D.; Warren Achey, Quakertown R. D.; Harry Bennett, Jr., Newtown; George A. Bleam, Sellersville; Bessie Yerkes, New Hope; Chester Bratsing, Doylestown; Lillian M. Chew, Wrightstown; Harvey M. Rice, Perkasie R. D.; Catherine Brady, Bristol; Frank Gourley, Newtown; Arabella Bender, Bristol R. D. 1.

Justice of the Peace James Laughlin, Bristol township, testified that in his opinion Veit was not intoxicated when he was taken to his office some time after the arrest.

Charles McClister, Roeloffs, pleaded guilty yesterday to driving while drunk, he being fined $200 and costs when his case was heard before Judge Keller. Thomas M. Daughton, also of Roeloffs, pleaded guilty to permitting operation of an automobile while driver was under influence of intoxicating liquor. He also was fined $200 and costs. The two, who were riding in the same automobile when arrested, were tried together.

Joseph Montague, Emilie, was sentenced to pay a $100 fine and costs yesterday, when tried for driving while drunk. He pleaded guilty.

With no frills in his story, Milton Heller, Quakertown R. D. 3, admitted on the stand yesterday that he was drunk when arrested on November 13th. He told the court that he had been to a shooting match in Green Lane and won two turkeys and a goose. "I was so happy I took two glasses of beer and got a 'load' on. I went back home and the next thing I knew I was in the 'coop.'" Heller told the judge that he would never appear in court again. The sentence imposed was payment of $100 fine and costs.

Cline Kissel, Chalfont, pleading guilty to driving an automobile while drunk, changed his plea from "not guilty

AN INCONSISTENT PROGRAM

The Government's plan to start a national small house construction program under the burden of a proposed fifteen per cent freight rate increase on building materials is like a man trying to drive his car with the brakes on. In the language of Douglass Whitlock, general counsel of the Structural Clay Products Institute, "the government drive for low-cost housing is dead before it starts if freight rates are increased on the major building materials."

This would seem logical. Somebody must pay the freight and usually it is the consumer. Undoubtedly, it would be true in this case because, due to the general slump in building, the business of the building material men has been none too good anyway. Apparently, the building industry was greatly encouraged when the President appointed his housing committee and announced that immediate steps would be taken to clean up the variously estimated housing shortage of from three and one half to six million units by supplying small cost houses to be built by private capital.

"An increase in the present freight rates on building materials," says Mr. Whitlock, speaking for the brick and tile industry, "would make impossible low-cost construction within the price ranges established by the government. This becomes apparent when it is recognized that one-third of the total delivered cost of brick and tile consist of transportation charges." That sounds sensible.

MEASURING ART

Chicago may not be one's first choice as center of American culture, but so far as lies within the powers of the artistic circles of the Windy City modernism will be made to give way to a return of classicism, or conservatism at the least.

The style of the paintings which won top awards at the annual exhibition of American paintings and sculpture at the Chicago Art Institute indicates victory for Mrs. Logan, who was incensed by the award of the Frank A. Logan prize in 1935 to the cartoon-like "Thanksgiving by Doris Lee and who protested vigorously at that time against "the devastating monster of distortion in modern art." She wrote a book and founded a society, both called Sanity in Art, with the expressed purpose of "destroying the false gods of surrealism, dadaism and kindred artisms."

The prizes this time went to paintings of easily recognizable subjects and of conventional design. The Logan prize was awarded to Aaron Bohrod, Chicago artist, for his Wyoming landscape, a desolate roadside with a gasoline filling station as main feature; the Harris medal to Irene Piene of New York for "Frosty Morning," a picture of a group of trees.

Not yet satisfied with the quality of Chicago art, the outspoken Mrs. Logan while appreciative of the sanity and regularity of Wyoming landscape, said of it "It isn't worth a nickel."

Peace is a period when nations try their best to damage one another without a declaration of war.

The States will be regulated and supervised from Washington. In other words, the sovereignty of the States will disappear and supreme authority be lodged in the Federal Government, which, with the enhanced powers now possessed by the President—to say nothing of additional ones sought—would make this a one-man government indeed. If that is not a change in our governmental system, what is it?

THE THREE bills now in Congress, which if enacted as the President wants them, would bring about this change, are these:

First, the new Crop Control bill, which will give to the Federal Government power to fix in each State the amount of wheat, corn, tobacco, cotton and rice which may be raised annually within its borders, and to impose penalties upon residents of the States for violation of the quota fixed, as well as give rewards for compliance.

Second, the Wage and Hour Control bill, which will give to a Federal board power to fix in each State the wages citizens of the States may pay employees, the number of hours they may work and the conditions under which they shall labor.

THE THIRD bill, impossible of passage without Administration support, is the so-called Federal Anti-Lynching bill. In the event of a lynching, this gives the Government the right to investigate the conduct of local county and state officials, and if it is concluded by Federal officials that the local county officials have not adequately performed their duties, the Federal Government may penalize both the local official and the local government. Clearly, if the Federal authority can do this, it can also give itself power to investigate the conduct of elections in the States. What that would mean can be easily imagined. Aside from the fact that the proposed law will not prevent or lessen lynchings, it encroaches in a way repugnant to the whole spirit of our form of government.

IN VIEW of the clarity with which these bills attack the already weakened rights of the States, and the certainty that they will have to be passed upon by the Supreme Court, the convictions of Chief Justice Charles E. Hughes are certainly of interest. On August 21, 1936, speaking in Chicago before the American Bar Association, the Chief Justice said these significant words:

"Paradoxical as it may seem, not only the security but the efficiency of the Union lies in the appropriate maintenance of the authority of the States within proper spheres of local government and local policy. Despite all the economic changes and the intimacies of closely related activities, notwithstanding the vast expansion of inter-state commerce in novel forms, leading to the unanticipated applications of the national authority, which was granted with extraordinary wisdom in a very general formula, the States continue as reservoirs of power reserved, not conferred, by which they deal with a multitude of particular concerns, and enjoy differentiations congenial to local sentiment."

"HOWEVER difficult it may be, in constitutional interpretation, to maintain perfectly, and to the satisfaction of all, this balance between the State and nation, it is of the essence of American institutions that it should be preserved so far as human wisdom makes this possible, and that encroachments upon State authority, however contrived, should be resisted with the same intelligent determination as that which demands that the national authority should be fully exercised to meet national needs."

It hardly could be stated more clearly than that.

"GIVE HER WINGS" by MARIE BLIZARD

SYNOPSIS

When Julie Allerdycce, 19-year-old daughter of Professor Allerdycce of the Ramsey Preparatory School for Boys, manages to get herself engaged to Dr. Richard Jessup, Fayette's most eligible bachelor, she looks forward to a glamorous future as a married woman. Of course, most people in town had thought Dick would marry Millicent Dodd, who is 33 while he is 38, but Millicent hides her disappointment and gives an engagement party for Julie. Less tactful is Tommy Jessup, Dick's younger brother. He is still in college, and has always loved Julie. He tells her she will be sorry if she spoils four lives by marrying Dick. Julie tells Tommy to mind his business, but in less than six weeks she begins to find being engaged is boring.

CHAPTER VII

When she and Dick were married—
Julie faced the facts. There were no romantic pictures for her this night. There was only the inescapable truth that her life would be no more exciting when she was married than it was at that moment.

The brief six weeks of her engagement had proven that fact. At first it had been exciting to be the guest of honor at luncheons and bridge parties. The Merriams had given a cocktail party for her and Dick—and miracle of miracles!—Dick had been able to go with her. It had been exciting to talk about her trousseau and a possible wedding date in October. Now that she was engaged, she had no wish to rush into matrimony and, strangely enough, Dick did not urge her. It had been exciting to select a setting for her sparkling diamond.

"But there's been darn little else," she said and shut off the radio. She picked up her book and turned to the opening chapter. She read a few pages and found that she could not concentrate. The memory of Wednesday night's dinner party shut out the words on the page.

Mrs. Hershey had given a dinner for her and Dick and six faculty members. Dr. Hershey was headmaster at Ramsay and the dinner was an Occasion. It marked Julie's accepted status as a coming bride, a future hostess at similar dinners.

The dinner had been excellent, the evening dull. But Julie, in her old black velvet with a new lace dinner jacket, had clothed herself in a pose. She had gazed in her anticipated night—the one that she practiced that night—as the wife of Dr. Jessup. Twice she had caught Dick stifling a yawn, and felt a mood of tenderness for his fatigue. Wasn't that the way a young, understanding bride of a hard-working physician should feel?

Her momentary tenderness was soon dissolved after the party. They were alone in the car and the night was beautiful.

"Oh, Dick, it's such a divine night! I don't feel like going home. Let's ride over to the Franklins. It isn't far and they'll be up."

Dick smiled at her in the wry way that was so much like Tommy, and said, "Not tonight, honey, I'm dead for sleep."

Instantly angered, she had retorted, "Dick, why is it that you're always dying for sleep when you're with me? It's getting to be an old story and I don't like it. Sunday night, I was simply disgraced at Althea's because you didn't call for me. How do you think it sounded to say that you fell asleep in your office and forgot about me?"

The doctor sighed and said patiently, "I know it's not much fun.

for you but, Julie, babies will arrive in the middle of the night and there isn't anything I can do about it. They get first rights to escort service, you know."

In the end they had gone to the Franklins' and Dick had dozed in his chair with his tired eyes wide open.

"A lifetime of it!" Julie murmured disconsolately.

The telephone rang. Its shrill demanding ring was a sudden live note in the morose island of her thoughts. She picked up the instrument.

"May I speak to Miss Julie Allerdycce?"

nose and tied a ribbon around her hair.

Pete Waddell, a few minutes later, took a monkey suit from the cockpit and helped her into it. She tucked her curls under a helmet that was too large for her, wishing she had a mirror.

"Boy, but you'd look cute in the newspapers! Better think over what I told you about learning to fly. A girl like you would go places sure."

"Well—let's go," she said in a small voice because her heart thumped in her throat.

He gave her his hand to steady

Julie opened her eyes and looked over the edge.

"This is she," she answered knowing the voice but unable to place it. "This is Pete Waddell. The Spring dance at the Favorite Country Club. Remember?"

"Oh, yes, of course! You're the aviator?"

"Good girl! You can't see the same little tiger fly?" He waited in the silence and began again: "Guess you've been having your quota of thrills, eh?"

Again Julie didn't answer. "No offense intended. Don't you remember that I asked you to give me a ring when you wanted to try a flight?"

"I'd completely forgotten," she replied coolly.

Well, how about it? Suppose I fly over Tomorrow afternoon if the weather's clear?"

Julie hesitated while she searched her usually quick mind for a plausible refusal. She wasn't going to tell any smart aleck that she was afraid to fly.

"It's a date," he answered before she could think of one. "Keep your eye peeled, little girl, and I'll come out of the clouds around two."

At two o'clock on Thursday afternoon she heard the hum of his motor over her house, watched it circle and settle in the field back of the Brook's house.

She ran upstairs, powdered her her and she stepped onto the wing. The plane looked horribly shaky and insecure, a shockingly inadequate thing to keep her safe between the earth and the sky. She got into the cockpit awkwardly, giving herself a whack on the head against the edge of the upper wing.

Waddell climbed beside her and the throttle roared wide open. Julie closed her eyes and thought of the safety of her cool bedroom. The throttle was quiet for a minute and suddenly opened up again. They rushed dizzily over the field.

Julie drew her knees up and clutched the edge of the dash in front of her. The earth bumped along under them and then they were rising, sailing in a sea of cream. She opened her eyes and looked over the edge. Then her fear left her and she gave herself over to riding on nothingness while the wind tore past them. Gingerly she looked over the side again as though she were in a boat. The familiar landmarks were still familiar but they looked like designs in a landscape gardener's plan. The fields dwindled to patches that were smaller and smaller. The houses and churches were like houses and churches that you put under a Christmas tree.

Dusek and Kennedy are two of the finest contestants in the game and anything is liable to happen when they enter the mat.

BOOK-MINDED THIEF

SEATTLE, Wash.—(INS)—This fellow must like reading in bed:

An unknown intruder who entered the home of Oscar Wold took a bed, mattress and bed lamp.

All he lacked for real comfort was a good book, perhaps a crime thriller.

Battling to Louis Bout

Bob Pastor, the man who stayed away from Joe Louis, stayed too close to Nathan Mann of New Haven and lost the decision in New York. Pastor is shown on the canvas for no count after a right delivered by Mann. The winner may meet Joe Louis.

CELTICS FIVE WIN

OPENING CAGE TILT

A newly-organized independent basketball team of Bristol, the Celtics, opened its season last night by nosing out the Jourden Diesel School five, 29-27, on the latter's floor. The tilt was close from beginning to end and decided in the last minute of play when "Charlie" Hughes, former Bristol High School star, hit the net for a pair of twin-pointers.

Hughes was high scorer for the winning combination and the losers' best was "Willie" Fritz. Hughes made six field goals and added a foul for a total of thirteen points. Joe Gallagher was a close second with a quartet of two-pointers.

The Celtics are managed by Vince Della who expects to book quite a number of games for his club with teams of this vicinity, Philadelphia and Trenton.

better stuff than either Winooka and Pillow Fight as he went on to hang up some notable scores in this country. Now Le Bambino may take up his task and aim to better it.

Le Bambino has been service not only in his native France but also in England where he was a starter in the Epsom Derby and, although unplaced, turned in a good account of himself. On the strength of that, he may be a powerful menace to American stars.

The steady influx of South American thoroughbreds this year has been notable and marked with a degree of success. Chief of these have been Caballero II and Sahari II, both of which figured in a winning coup in their initial American appearances. Caballero II, which turns in his best performances over a long distance of ground, is now the property of Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs, who acquired the horse via the claiming route immediately following his first victory. Gradually moving up into higher brackets, Caballero II proved a sturdy campaigner and even made the champion Seabiscuit step lively on occasion.

three young women were riding from Washington, D. C., to their homes in Newport, R. I., was considerably damaged. The accident occurred on the Doylestown-Buckingham road on October 9th. W. D. Lane, Trenton, N. J., director of the New Jersey Juvenile Delinquency Commission, was an eyewitness and told his version of the case.

Testimony was heard in the case of Mrs. Elizabeth K. McIlvaine, 15 E. Front street, Trenton, N. J., a former resident of Bristol. Mrs. McIlvaine was charged with operating a motor vehicle while under influence of intoxicating liquor.

Withdrawing a plea of not guilty, Mrs. McIlvaine, 32, charged with drunken driving, was permitted by the Court to enter a plea of guilty yesterday when the trial was resumed.

She was given a suspended sentence on condition that she pay costs of prosecution and the sum of $100 in the nature of a fine. Miss L. Gertrude Bright was appointed probation officer, the period being two years.

Anthony Browning, 19, Philadelphia, was the first witness. Browning stated he was operating a car on a highway, near Croydon, September 7, when he collided with a car driven by the defendant. "The defendant was intoxicated. She staggered and her breath smelled of alcohol," said Browning, who told the Court he was driving on his right side of the highway and as far over as possible when his car was struck. Peter Morsa, 25, an occupant in the Browning car, asserted that the defendant was drunk. "The way she was talking at the time I noticed she must have had something to drink," he said.

Edward Pfeil, 20, another occupant in the Browning car, testified that the defendant said: "I just love these drivers without insurance." "Mrs. McIlvaine walked wobbly. Her breath had an odor as if she had been drinking and she became abusive," he testified.

Corporal R. D. Evans, Oxford Valley sub-station of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, who investigated the accident, testified he detected an odor of alcohol on her breath and noticed she staggered. "I took her to the office of Dr. J. Fred Wagner, Bristol, where she was examined. After the doctor pronounced her under the influence of liquor she became abusive and called the doctor a vile name," he said.

Dr. Wagner testified she was very definitely under the influence of liquor. "She swayed, staggered, was bleary-eyed and talkative. She became abusive in the office and called me a vile name—and tried to injure me by slamming the screen door in my face," said Dr. Wagner.

Testimony also revealed by Corporal R. D. Evans that she admitted drinking beer in the afternoon.

Mrs. McIlvaine testified she had several beers in Trenton and was on her way to the movies in Philadelphia when the accident happened.

"It was my suggestion that an officer be called. I did not curse at anyone except Dr. Wagner. I did call him names because I was hysterical," said the defendant, who admitted she was under the influence of liquor but didn't know it.

Character witnesses included deputy clerk of orphans court, Joseph Keating and Earl Brown, of the commissioners' office, and William Simons, all of Bristol, who said the defendant bears a good reputation.

"You have the unique distinction of being the first woman I have had to sentence in seven years for this offense," said Judge Boyer.

approaching they jumped into a parked automobile. While being questioned as to whose car they were in, the girls became very abusive, according to police, and this led to their arrest.

At the county prison the girls will be fingerprinted by the State Police in an endeavor to learn their identity.

Plumbers, contractors, citizens from Quakertown and other communities and members of Quakertown Borough Council attended a meeting at the headquarters of the American Legion a few nights ago at which time a talk on the plumbing code was given.

The meeting was called to order by Vernon J. Zweier, president of Borough Council, who then placed it in charge of Clarence A. G. Pease, chairman of the building committee, under whose jurisdiction the plumbing code has been placed.

William H. Ambrose, assistant State Inspector for eastern Pennsylvania, outlined the act. He gave particular credit to Borough Council for its efficient setup. He also commented favorably upon conditions as he found them. He cited, however, that a provision of the act calls for an experienced plumber to serve as the local inspector.

Mr. Ambrose paid a compliment to Arlington Fluck, who has been acting as inspector, and who will continue in this capacity until January 1st. Mr. Ambrose pointed out that Mr. Fluck has enforced the law impartially.
